‘Pharmacy and Nutrition’ students learn about developing healthy food products

Faculty members and students from the College of Pharmacy and from the Nutrition, and Dietetics program from both Al Ain university campuses visited “Tate and Lyle” Food Beverage Solutions Company Technical Center in Dubai, one of the top food research and development companies in the Middle East.

This company provides ingredients and solutions to the global food and beverage industries to produce healthy types of different food items.

It was a good experience for the Nutrition and Dietetics students to get the chance to know more about producing different healthy food products. Also, the students on this visit got a tour of the technical center where they witnessed how different healthy food products can be developed and evaluated at small scale levels by using several subjective and objective techniques.
